Togolese American Community of Central Texas

Over the years, there has been a growing Togolese American community in Central Texas. As a result, this growing Togolese-American community has sought to organize itself by starting an association. According to the leadership of the Togolese American community, they want to showcase Togolese culture and also grow the Togolese Community of Central Texas. As a result, this growing Togolese-American community has sought to organize the community during a time when action towards wellness, community, recreation and diversity were seldom attempted by the Togolese people.

According to the leadership of the Togolese community they plan to organize three main events that will showcase Togolese culture. Moreover, these three main events are to hold an “End of Year Party,” celebrate the “Togolese Independence Day” and the “July 4th.” For instance, the first event that is coming up for them is the “Togolese End of Year Celebration.” This event will enlighten Central Texas and attract numerous magnets such as jobs and education. Currently, the local universities draw Africans and Togolese to the Central Texas region. Now, they believe it is time to really organize the community.
