DON'T MESS WITH TEXAS PRIDE!

The University of Texas Longhorns football Coach, Charlie Strong, sports the Golden Cowboy Hat presented to the victors of the Red River Rivalry. Strong led the Longhorns to a 24-17 win against the 10th-ranked Sooners on Saturday, October 10, 2015. This victory was momentous because of the pride of the Longhorns being questioned. Strong said, "We heard all week how the pride has been lost. How we don't play hard." Last week the Longhorns lost to TCU 50 - 7. About that defeat, Strong said, "we go out and we kind of just lay an egg and this week we came out and we wanted to impose our will. We wanted to play physical and watch our team just go to work." This marks Coach Strong's first signature victory for the Texas Longhorns.

Diverse Consumers Overwhelmingly Optimistic About Financial Future

Wells Fargo survey affirms African American, Asian and Hispanic communities more hopeful about finances, managing credit than combined general population

(Black PR Wire) - SAN FRANCISCO - (BUSINESS WIRE) - Diverse consumers feel optimistic about the current U.S. economic outlook, according to the third "How America Buys and Borrows" survey by Wells Fargo & Company (NYSE: WFC) and Ipsos. Eighty-eight percent of diverse consumers surveyed report having a positive outlook compared to 79 percent of the combined general population - a seven percent increase from last year. This is the second wave of data Wells Fargo has released as part of its annual support of the American Bankers Association's Get Smart About Credit campaign.

When asked about personal finances, on average 60 percent of African American, Asian and Hispanic consumers said they expect their financial situation to be "somewhat" or "much" better a year from now, compared to 48 percent of the combined general population. The survey, fielded in June 2015, measured the attitudes and behaviors of more than 1,000 African American, Asian and Hispanic consumers about finances and managing credit.

"Our vision of helping customers succeed financially means making sure they know where to go for the information and resources they need to take charge of their credit. That's why we support Get Smart About Credit month to ensure we're highlighting the tools and resources they need to make informed credit choices," said Shelley Freeman, head of Wells Fargo's Consumer Credit Solutions group. "With optimism high, it's especially important that we continue to offer our diverse customers access to the information and resources they need."

Survey results - diverse communities more hopeful than combined general population

verse communities, the findings unveiled that, similar to the combined general population, diverse consumers believe credit can help them achieve their financial goals if used responsibly. However, diverse communities vary in how proud they are of their own credit scores. Among the combined general population, 51 percent of consumers report feeling proud of their credit score, however 59 percent of Asians, 34 percent of African Americans and 48 percent of Hispanics report the same.

Though diverse consumers are optimistic, their confidence levels are lower. Fifty-one percent of Asians, 46 percent of African Americans and 53 percent of Hispanics report feeling they may not know enough about making good borrowing decisions compared to 58 percent of the combined general population.
