RAPPIN' Tommy Wyatt School Bond Gets Mixed Responses

The $892,245,000 Bond Election that is currently being held is getting mixed responses. It is one of the few times where citizens have been so split over one issue. On one side there are groups saying that we need the bonds while others are calling for a tax revolt.

One has to wonder why the school district waited for such a long time to call for a bond election. It appears that most of the money will be used to do necessary maintenance that has been neglected over the years. While very little of this bond package will go towards improving education in the system.

Proposition 4 is related to academic initiatives, fine arts and athletics. This includes facility improvements for career and technical education, fine arts, athletics, special education and facility renovations at the Ridgeview campus (old Anderson High School) for the School for Young Men. The amount is $168,564,000.

The school district would be better served by joining in the protest to have the Governor return the money that he took out of education to shore up other areas of the budget. With the improved economic condition of Texas, that the Governor is constantly talking about, it would be appreciated if he would return the money that was taken from education when times were tough.

We now have one of the largest balances in the Rainy Day Fund that we have ever had and the fund is expected to continue to grow. Currently, the Texas Legislature is attempting to have money returned to the General Fund.

As long as the Governor takes the position that tax payers can continue to be expected to pay increased taxes on the bonds as well as property taxes to support our schools, we will continue to be hit with these unreasonable bond requests.

We need to vote no on the Bonds and work on a better solution.

Charles Akins,
Educator

by Marcia Williams, MWApr
As The Villager newspaper prepares for its 40-year anniversary celebration, our staff sat down with a few people who are active in the community to get their perspective on how The Villager has changed or shaped their lives. Over the next few weeks we'll present various stories of The Villager's impact on Central Texas and its residents.

Charles Akins: Youth Impact

As a retired educator, I have to say that one of the things that most impressed me about Tommy and The Villager Newspaper is that long ago he made it a point to encourage and inspire young journalists through his Youth Brigade. This section of the paper sends a strong educational message, the National Urban League, will speak on Saturday, May 4, 2013, at 8:30 a.m. during the convocation address on the athletic field located at 900 Chicon Street. In addition to the ceremony for the 2013 graduates, HT's Class of 1963 will be honored at the graduation program and throughout the Reunion Weekend 2013 festivities. Students who earned high academic honors and placement on the Dean's List and Honor Roll will be recognized at the annual Honors Day Convocation, scheduled on Friday, May 3 at 10 a.m. in King-Seabrook Chapel.

Morial is viewed as the catalyst for the changes occurring in the nearly 100-year old civil rights organization—The National Urban League—emphasizing closing racial and economic gaps. His creativity has led to initiatives such as the Urban Youth Empowerment Program to assist young adults in securing sustainable jobs, and Entrepreneurship Centers in five cities to help the growth of small businesses. Also, Morial created the National Urban League's Empowerment Fund, which has pumped almost $200 million into urban impact businesses, including minority businesses through both debt and equity investments.

Morial is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania with a degree in Economics and African American Studies. He also holds a law degree from the Georgetown University Law Center in Washington D.C. and has several honorary degrees. He teaches Constitutional Law and Business Law as an adjunct faculty at Xavier University in Louisiana.

His political accomplishments include winning the Louisiana State Bar Association Award for his legal services for the poor and disadvantaged. At age 26, he was the youngest lawyer to argue and win a major case before the Louisiana Supreme Court. He was named Legislative Rookie of the Year, Education Senator of the Year, and Environmental Senator of the Year, while authoring laws on a wide range of important subjects. Morial led the New Orleans renaissance of the 1990s as mayor of the city, improving urban issues, reducing violent crimes and murders, and cutting the unemployment rate in half while reducing poverty rates.

Currently, he serves as an executive committee member of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the Black Leadership Forum, and Leadership 18; and is a board member of the Muhammad Ali Center and the New Jersey Performing Arts Center. He has been recognized as one of the 100 most influential black Americans by Ebony magazine, as well as one of the Top 50 Nonprofit Executives by the Nonprofit Times.

For more information about Reunion Weekend 2013, Honors or Commencement Convocations, call 512.505.3073. Convocations are open to the public. Event parking is available on Chalmers Avenue.

On one Good Times sit-com episode, the Florida Evans character stated that inflation, unemployment and high interest were some things that did not tend to discriminate. It seems that some of that is becoming a triumph all these years later. Rose Smith, founder of R.O.S.E.S. (Reaching Out Supporting Every Sister) stated that they offer help that is not limited to a zip code. "We don't want people to feel alone during trying times," stated Smith. She and her team are gearing up to help young ladies prepare for the prom, which is almost considered a high school rite of passage. Other services are offered by R.O.S.E.S.

helping our young people move into the field of journalism and communications. We need to do all we can to direct youth in a positive direction. Our society needs good journalists, and encouraging students from diverse backgrounds to pursue the field is a very wise move on Tommy's part.

Forming The Youth Brigade was a great idea for students to report on what's taking place at their schools and in their communities, and it's one of my favorite parts of the paper. I read it every week to stay up-to-date on what's going on with young people in the community.

Past and Present

during the year. Although some schools have already had their proms, many are slated for the month of May. While Smith states that they have already helped some young girls by loaning prom dresses to them, "There's still young ladies that are looking for help. We want to continue to do it."

They are loaning such dresses, as well as accepting additional donations of prom dresses.

According to

The consistency of the newspaper has been remarkable—40 years! I can remember a time before Tommy started The Villager, and there was a marked difference in how we received news about the African American community in and around Austin.

When the demographics of East Austin began to change, The Villager kept us all informed. For years Tommy encouraged the community to be a part of the change—that is now here—so that we could help make the community a better place. We needed that voice.

Personal Connection

My interacting with Tommy has always been very positive. Smith, a lot of their events are held at Alamo Park in East Austin. "Our heart kind of lies in helping and supporting East Austin," she stated. She said they are driven to help people who are struggling, or connecting them to other entities that can help.

Some of their other events include empowerment brunches. She stated that they held one in March, and it brought a huge crowd. They also hold a Back-To-School Garage Sale where they allow vendors to set up, He's insightful and well-prepared, whether in person or with the articles he writes for his column. You can always get an accurate view on what's happening socially and politically we you engage with him. He has proven that he really does love his community.

How Tommy approaches the news directly and in a positive way is something we should all appreciate and be proud of. I take my hat off to him and congratulate him on 40 years of bringing the news to Austin and Central Texas.

We should all be out in force to support The Villager on their 40th anniversary celebration! sell their products, and keep the proceeds. She said the foundation gives away school supplies to all children in attendance. In August, they hold a Meet The Authors event, which gives authors a networking platform to become known in the local market.

Smith mentioned that they have helped victims of tragic events; such as home fires. She recalled that when she first started three years ago they helped a female obtain medical care when a health crisis struck and she had no insurance coverage.

"We're trying to enrich women's lives through giving," she stated. She said men and children are not left out of the loop, and that men approached her with pleas to be included when they found out what she was doing.

As she explained it, R.O.S.E.S. was created on the foundation of encouraging people to help without expecting anything in return. She said she was raised in the country where community was strong and people looked out for each other. She said this overflows into the organization.

Girl Empowerment

Aubri Allen-Brent
Dailey Middle School

This week my Mother & I got to meet with the representatives of GenAustin. Gen Austin is a girl's empowerment group. They told us a couple of facts here they are;

- More than 84% of girls believed that being thin was popular.
- 29% of girls 13 -18 who have boyfriends have been pressured to having sex, drinking alcohol, and any other adult conduct.

- 77% of students are bullied mentally, verbally and physically

We also learned that body image is important, because you have to care about yourself. And if you think that being skinny is best thing, it is not because everyone is beautiful in their own way. Even the model's on the magazines is not their real body. They go through a process called photo shop. Photo shop is application used to enhance things on your body to make it more appealing on a computer, magazine or anything like that. So always remember everyone is beautiful in their own way & don't ever let anyone bring you down. J

Until next time GO WOLVESS !!!!

Project Graduation

Marcus Austin
Cedar Ridge High School

The school year is almost over and there are many different activities going on at Cedar Ridge High School. Like the 1st annual project graduation powder puff football game happened on Saturday April 27th at the Cedar Ridge field. The game was played at 9:00 am the senior girls took on the junior girls. This was to help raise money for project graduation for the senior class. Project graduation is an organization by PTSA and senior students that helps raise money that will be used to help fund the prom that will take place on May the 18th at the Hyatt hotel. Some of the money will also help fund the senior lock in at

Main Event after graduation on June 1st. project graduation accepts donations as well as any seniors willing to help earn money, through selling candy or popcorn.

The last 6 weeks of school it's a great time as well as a stressful time for me because final exams are soon to come. I don't do so great at testing so I really have to hit the books hard to get the grade I want on my exams so my senior year can finish on a good note. It is very helpful because most of our teachers give us final exam reviews to give us an idea what will be on the real final exam, we go through most of the review as a class so I really need to make sure I pay attention when we go through it this time around.

The final piece to our graduation came in on April 30! We received our cap and gowns. We are that much closer to June 1st!

This year the Rosewood Baptist Drill Team will be attending National Baptist Congress in Phoenix, Arizona.

That's all the news for this week. Thank you for reading. Take care & God bless!

STAAR Test

SaNaya White
Cedars Academy

This past week I just had both of my STAAR for tests for reading and math. I think I rocked them! There were a few hard ones but most of the test was really easy. I liked taking the test, a lot of people in my class didn't. Lots of people got frustrated. I made a deal with my mom that if I get both test grades above a 90 I get a swimming pool for the yard to swim in! I cross my fingers and say a prayer... We will see what happens. Good luck to all the students that took the test! Yayyy!! It's over!

Hawks Anniversary

Week of Testing

Jaquarry Wilson
Del Valle High School

This past week, all of the juniors of Del Valle High School were all gathered together for a great and much anticipated event that every student in the school gets excited for. This event is nothing other the TAKS testing. While you may have detected many a sarcastic moment in the last few sentences, rethinking that just might not be a bad idea. I believe that all students look forward to this standardized tests and the main reason for that is to get them over with. They are time consuming and test us on objectives that we have learned from years prior. The only good thing to look forward to, in my opinion, is the chance to miss class. We rarely get any days off and even during the days of testing, the administrators find that it's a good idea to make us go to class even after we're drained from the testing for the last three periods of the day.

In other news, even after a few staff members at Del Valle didn't hesitate to read my article about the problem of having no soap in several bathrooms on campus, the problem still exists. While I requested that soap be put in the restrooms immediately, I was denied. I was told by an assistant principal to return to the testing site and that I'd be "alright" without washing my hands. It's a disgusting matter, really. Let's examine this, shall we. There was absolutely no soap in the restroom. I'm certain that there were at least fifty boys who used the restroom because it was the only one available to us who were testing. This wasn't too long before lunch began. Just imagine all of the boys, who used the restroom without washing their hands afterwards, going to lunch and touching the fork dispenser, tongs to grab salad, and the sliding doors to grab something to drink. Then, think about all of the people who touch that after them. Isn't that a great way to spread icky bacteria? Maybe after reading this article this problem will finally be solved.

Tips

Imani Demps
Del Valle High School

Now that school is basically over. I can say it was a struggle trying to maintain grades and stay out of trouble. But I did it. The main thing you have to do is just stay focused. School is not a place for games and it's also not a place to make friends. When you get in high school all the people that you called friends aren't your friends anymore but, you will meet new people and yall will make it far. School helped me learn alot about people and about myself.

I think if it wasn't for school I would be out of control. I have learned without education you can't do anything. Education is the key to success.

Totally Cool, Totally Art

Students Prepare Exhibit of Art

by Shirley A. Hammond

Follow her on twitter.com/@xtremeridewish1

At various Austin Recreation Centers around town, students have been learning how to use their creative energies to make various art pieces. This after-school program has been in place since November, and goes under the label Totally Cool, Totally Art (TCTA). At the Dottie Jordan Recreation Center at 2803 Loyola Lane, the students' months of learning and applying their skills has paid off. Some of their finished work is in 3-D, others are wall pieces or paintings. One youth created a painting of Tupac that amazingly resembles the late rapper's likeness. Now these and other pieces are finished and ready for an art-loving public to enjoy.

One of their instructors is musician and visual artist Clint Hofmeister, who works for Austin Parks & Recreation Department. The National Arts Program website lists Hofmeister's painting and relief piece titled Portrait of a Lady as a third place winner in their December 2012 competition.

Other qualified instructors, art teachers and movie producers have also assisted the students with finding and showcasing their hidden talents.

Other city recreation centers offer similar after-school enrichment and summer camps for children.

TCTA has given students something constructive to do after school lets out. Some of their work was transported to Alamo Recreation Center at 2100 Alamo Street.

Shortly after their availability for viewing at this East Austin venue, much of the completed work will be ready for exhibition in mid-May. The Austin Parks and Recreation Center will hold an exhibit of the students' work at The Dougherty Art Center's Julia C. Butridge Gallery. The center is located at 1100 Barton Springs Road, and it's open from 10am-9pm, Monday-Saturday.

A public closing ceremony will take place, where people can view the student work for the last time. This event will be held at the same location, on May 13 from 6:00pm-8:00pm. An awards ceremony, along with refreshments will be available.

According to the city website (www.austintexas.gov), Dottie Jordan was an AISD orchestra teacher who spoke to the City Council about retaining the park for area residents when the property was being considered for a condominium community. Later the park and rec. center were named for her.

Texas Senate Passes Senator Zaffirini's Legislation Improving State Contracting and Procurement

(AUSTIN) – The Texas Senate this week passed three bills by Senator Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, that improve the State of Texas' contracting practices, including by enhancing contract oversight and uniformity.

"Texas state agencies and institutions of higher education manage thousands of contracts valued cumulatively at more than $100 billion," said Senator Zaffirini, Chair of the Senate Government Organization Committee. "Proper oversight and transparency in state contracting is critical, especially because so much taxpayer money is at stake."

Senator Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo

Senator Zaffirini's Senate Bill (SB) 1680 promotes greater uniformity in state contracts. The bill would standardize contract management practices for all state agencies, including by requiring that the agencies establish formal contracting guidelines, maintain all contracts in a central location and include uniform provisions in each contract. The bill also would prohibit a major contract from being negotiated by only one employee.

"Greater uniformity in state contracting would help ensure the best value for each dollar spent," Senator Zaffirini said.

Her SB1681 enhances contract oversight by requiring the comptroller to develop training programs for contract managers; consult with state agencies in developing forms, contract terms and criteria; and establish a uniform evaluation process and include performance reviews in a vendor tracking system.

"Contracts must be monitored closely at every stage of the process, including solicitation, negotiation and management," Senator Zaffirini said. "Proper contract oversight helps mitigate risk, contain costs and ensure quality and efficiency."

SB 1679 by Zaffirini would improve state agency procurement by requiring the comptroller to leverage state spending in the most efficient manner and to determine if certain services may be leveraged for multiple state agencies in one statewide contract at a cost savings.

A champion for government efficiency and transparency, Senator Zaffirini has introduced legislation to improve state contracting practices each legislative session since 2005.

House Introduces Congressional Term Limits Bill

Representative Matt Salmon Praised for Introducing Congressional Term Limits Amendment

April 25, 2013, Fairfax, VA – Representative Matt Salmon (R-AZ) introduced an amendment to the U.S. Constitution today which would limit the number of terms that a member of Congress may serve to three in the House of Representatives and two in the Senate.

Term limits for members of Congress has been spotlighted in recent weeks as former Senator and Vice Presidential nominee Joe Lieberman announced that after reflection on his 24 years in office that he now supported term limits.

The Lieberman statement was followed by a polls conducted by the Gallup Organization released last week showing that the American people would vote for congressional term limits by a 75 - 21 margin.

Phil Blumel, president of U.S. Term Limits, the nation's largest term limits advocacy group, called on Congress to send the Constitutional Amendment to the states for them to decide saying, "The public clearly wants term limits, and it is the ultimate conflict of interest for federal elected officials to prevent the states from making the decision on whether their own terms should be limited."

Representative Salmon is introducing the amendment on a tide of public dissatisfaction with Congress, and Blumel believes this public outcry may break the log jam that has prevented consideration stating, "Many members of Congress are hearing from their constituents that they want the tough issues in D.C. to be acted upon rather than a continual kicking of the can down the road. In this context, they are realizing that a constitutional amendment limiting terms for members of Congress may be the only way to make our political system work again.

"Now, Congress faces a crisis. The people hold the legislative branch of our federal government in such low regard largely because they believe that they are no longer represented by fellow citizens but instead by professional politicians. It is time to change this. It is time to put citizens back in charge. It is time to pass congressional term limits."

Senator David Vitter (R-LA) has introduced the same congressional term limits amendment in the U.S. Senate.

To become part of the U.S. Constitution, the amendment requires a two-thirds vote in each house of Congress and ratification by three quarters or 38 out of 50 states.

Texas House District 50, Republican Candidate

by: Tsoke (Chuch) Adjavon

Candidate Michael Cargill, changes political parties.

The Texas House District 50 in Central Texas has seen the addition of another candidate. Moreover, this candidate is not running on the Democratic ticket but on the Republican ticket. This candidate running for the Republican ticket is Michael Cargill. Last election cycle, he ran as a Democrat for Travis County Constable II.

Michael Cargill has decided to switch political parties due to the difference in "ideology." According to Cargill, "It is the Democrat leaders in County that left him and family." In other words, he believes that the local Democratic Party does not share the same values that he holds. For instance, he is a proponent of having school vouchers because he believes allowing "school choices would make the school more competitive." In addition, he has different views on gun politics than Democrats. According to Cargill, if the "gun background check passes, then it would dis-proportionally affect African Americans.

Currently, he is the only Republican candidate to run for the Texas House District 50. As a result, he doesn't have to spend much money or time. On the other hand, there are four Democrats running in the Primaries. Moreover, the Texas House District 50 comprises of North, and Northwest Austin; and Pflugerville. Furthermore, the Texas House District 50 is also comprised of numerous Independent voters.

Early Voting Began In Central Texas 4.29.13

by: Tsoke (Chuch) Adjavon

Vernagene Mott, Place 4

After the 2012 Elections, Central Texans will once again go the voting booth. In Austin, the electorate will vote on whether or not to pass four different bonds. The pro-bond electorate believes that the bonds would allow and provide more money for the school district, so they can complete some improvements. While those that oppose the bonds believe that it would lead to wasteful programs. On the other hand, the residents of Pflugerville will be voting on school board members. In the school board election, there are two incumbent running against two challengers.

On the Austin's ballot, there will be four various propositions. Moreover, proposition 1 deal with "Health, Environment, Equipment and Technology." Proposition number 2 calls for the "Safety, Security, and Relief from overcrowded conditions." Proposition 3 mentioned that it is for "Academic and

Lance Sandlin, Place 5

Building Infrastructure, Renovations and Repairs. Proposition 4 calls for the "Academic Initiatives, Fine Arts, and of Athleticism. The pro-bond crowd believes that these bonds would not have a major increasing factor on property taxes. While those that are against them believe that it is a "blank check" to the school board council; therefore, they would not spend the money accurately.

In Pflugerville, Mario Acosta (incumbent) and

Mario Acosta, Place 3

Tony Hanson (challenger) are running against each other for Place 3. In Place 4, Vernagene Mott will not be facing an opponent. Finally on Place 5, Carol L. Fletcher (incumbent) and Lance Sandlin (challenger) will be running against each other. The next Pflugerville school board members will be responsible in choosing the next superintendent.

However, in both elections the participation

may perhaps be very low due to the fact that it is an "off-year" election. Since these two elections deal with the educational process, it is very important to see a bigger voter turnout. Moreover, these two elections would have an impact on education, throughout Central Texas. Consequently, people should not forget plan for early voting due to the fact, it is flexible and there are very short lines.

What Kerry Washington's 'Scandal' Role Really Means

by H. Crosley, The Root

For some, Kerry Washington's portrayal of Olivia Pope on Scandal is a coup because it dismisses the idea that black women are unattractive in mainstream society, writes the New York Times.

It's clear that "Scandal" has touched a nerve: Twitter regularly blows up with "Scandal"-related tweets when the show is on, and the flood of cyberspace chatter has included debates about the interracial sex, the politics and the clothes. Ms. Washington's remark this year that she would have turned down the role had the president been black (out of concern that such a character might reflect an insider's view of Mr. Obama, whose administration she volunteers for) drew attention, too. "We're putting a lot of our hopes on Kerry's shoulders," said Yaba Blay, an assistant professor of Africana Studies at Drexel University, who live-tweets about the show with a group of female academics. "The conversations about her go beyond the role, to the idea of representing us well as middle-class and upper middle-class, educated women," mostly because of the scarcity of such images of black women.

We are the same women the media has said are not attractive, are not marriageable," she added.

Togolese Celebrates Independence Day

by: Tsoke (Chuch) Adjavon

The Togolese Diaspora held their 53rd Independence Day Celebration in Round Rock, although it was recently weathered by some unpleasant events. These current events remind Togolese of their humble beginnings. On April 27, 1960 the nation of Togo received its independence, which made it one of the first French colonies in West Africa that was set free to lead its on destiny. Upon receiving its independence, the Togolese people were jubilant and excited due to the fact they could determine their own future. However, their jubilation was cut short when the "Father of the Togolese Independence" and its first President Sylvanus Olympio was assassinated in a Coup D'Etat. Since, then Togo has seen some moments of violence and of peace.

Over the years, Togo has experienced both times of peace and times of violence. In the early 1980's until the early 1990's, Togo was dubbed the "Switzerland of Africa", due to its prosperity. But, in the mid 1990's to the present, Togo has been rocked by violence, as the people push for a true democracy. Just days before the Independence Day,

Togo was faced by a Teachers' Union work boycott. Then the students protested stating that the government has not listened to the Teachers' Union. During the protest, three students were shot by the security forces and later died.

Consequently, the Togolese Diaspora living in Central Texas understood that the celebration would be tampered down due to the recent violence occurring in Togo. Moreover, the Togolese Diaspora held their celebration in Round Rock. During the celebration, the President of the Togolese community, Mr. Foadey, welcomed the members and its guests. He expressed his joy of finally bringing the Togolese's Diaspora together to celebrate. After the salutations, another member of the Togolese Association gave a presentation of Togo. Then, the Togolese community prayed for both Togo and the United States. The members of the Association and their guests, all enjoyed Togolese cuisines after the program. Finally, the Togolese's Diaspora and its guests really took pleasure in celebration their Independence Day that evening.

First Taxi Drivers Union in Texas Joins National Taxi Workers Alliance, AFL-CIO

Affiliations will support taxi drivers' fight for economic rights

Drivers work up to 15 hours per day, 7 days a week, and yet earn less than minimum wage on many days and have no job security. While income is tightly regulated by the city through the meter, owners regularly increase lease fees charged to drivers that eat up much of their earnings. Drivers are not covered by workers comp or disability and have no insurance to protect themselves in case of an accident.

Merga Gemada, Vice-President of the TDAA, says, "The bare minimum protections required for a taxi driver to have a dignified life are not available to us today because of the economic instability we work under." Today's affiliation is also the launch for the TDAA's campaign for economic rights and dignity, in which drivers are demanding greater job security and a safety net against their precarious working conditions.

The National Taxi Workers Alliance (NTWA) was chartered by the AFL-CIO in 2011 with New York City and Philadelphia locals as the founding members. "It's unacceptable that taxi drivers, at the heart of the vibrancy that is Austin, labor with little pay, long hours and no benefits," said Bhairavi Desai, president of the NTWA. "By courageously organizing, the drivers are sending a message to echo from the halls of City Council to convention halls to taxi companies that these conditions must change. And the national taxi workers movement stands ready to heed their call of action."

Becky Moeller, President of the TX AFL-CIO, said, "The Texas AFL-CIO is delighted to welcome the Taxi Drivers Association of Austin to the state labor federation because this union understands that the only way to gain fair wages and benefits is for drivers to stand together. We know unions that do not get to bargain collectively can still make progress by appealing to our elected officials and, ultimately, to the public's sense of fairness."

have the least power in the system- the driver. Take the case of a veteran driver, Ashraf, who found himself in a fender-bender accident. He paid out of his own pocket to repair his taxi and got back on the road to earn a living. Days later, the taxi company attempted to extort $4000 from Ashraf for the accident. When he asked what this payment was for, the car was immediately taken from him. Ashraf spent the next several weeks without work. This is not an uncommon story.

Austin taxi drivers founded the TDAA in 2009 to organize and collectively address drivers' concerns. Today they have over 200 dues paying members.

Courtesy of Taxi Drivers Association of Austin

Today, the Taxi Drivers Association of Austin (TDAA) marks its affiliation with the National Taxi Workers Alliance of the AFL-CIO. This affiliation will enhance its organizing and advocacy capabilities and unite taxi drivers with other union members across the city, state and country in fighting for the rights of working people. Taxi drivers are classified as independent contractors and have not previously been represented by a labor union.

The classification of a worker as an independent contractor simply means that all the risks of driving a taxi are shifted onto the backs of those who

PROGRAMS ~ AWARENESS

TAKE INITIATIVE!
BECOME A VOLUNTEER DEPUTY REGISTRAR!

Austin, Texas – Help citizens register to vote by becoming a Volunteer Deputy Registrar. Volunteer Deputy Registrars promote voter registration most commonly at community events and within their own social networks. They distribute voter registration applications and confirm that all of the applications they provide are completed correctly. They also provide a receipt to show proof of registration and deliver applications to the Voter Registrar within 5 days of completion.

“Helping citizens register to vote is a rewarding activity that makes a real impact on our community,” said Travis County Tax Assessor-Collector and Voter Registrar, Bruce Elfant.

How can you become a Volunteer Deputy Registrar (VDR)? To volunteer, you must be age 18 or older and must attend a one-hour training session. During training, you will review the qualifications to become a VDR, learn how to register voters correctly and be officially sworn-in.

All training sessions are held the first Tuesday of the month. The next session will be held May 7th. One-hour sessions that day will be held starting at 10:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. in the main Travis County Tax Office located at 5501 Airport Boulevard, Austin, TX 78751.
